A way of looking.

From cities and architecture to wildlife, coasts and underwater environments, the photographs return to how people inhabit space, how light changes a place, and what scale makes visible.

The edit is organized as authored bodies of work, not destinations collected. Each sequence begins with a different form of attention.

BARCELONA / ARCHITECTURE

Inside La Sagrada Família, colored light and structural rhythm transform stone into something almost temporary.

The Hidden Rose

La Sagrada Família · Barcelona, Spain

When Stone Catches Fire

Passages

JAPAN / STREET & TRAVEL

Streets, windows and crossings are treated as frames. The smallest changes in movement give these places their tension.

Autumn Passage

Japan

Beneath the Cedars

Coast and Colony

UNITED KINGDOM / COAST & WILDLIFE

Seabird colonies and coastal paths place human observers inside an environment that does not belong to them.

Two Figures Among Wings

Farne Islands · United Kingdom

Island Keepers

Weather and Distance

NEW ZEALAND / LANDSCAPE

Separation becomes part of the photograph.
Light, weather and scale hold subjects apart
rather than pulling them together.

The Mountain Keeps Its Distance

New Zealand

Under a Low Sky

Into the Blue

PHILIPPINES / UNDERWATER

The underwater series moves between bodies, fish and openings. Density and clear light offer very different kinds of scale.

Under the Living Current

Bohol · Philippines

Through the Blue Window

Where the Cranes Return

CHINA / WILDLIFE

The edit stays with movement, posture and distance. No invented behavior is needed to give the encounter its structure.

A Quiet Descent

China

Crowned in Red

Scale and Weather

OKINAWA / ATMOSPHERE

Boats, lighthouses and aircraft hold small positions against enormous fields of sky and sea.

Lighthouse Beneath the Clouds

Okinawa · Japan

Plane over the Blue

Selected Works

FRANCE & ITALY / INDIVIDUAL WORKS

These selected singles share an interest in thresholds, framing, built space and the human measure within it.
